There was a small fire in the Glen woolen mill, at Norwich Town, soon after 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, which for a time looked bad, but it was handled by the help and soon put out with but small damage.

When the fire started Chief Stanton of the local department was asked to town clerks in the state blank licenses to be filled out and issued for the current year. These licenses will be in force for one year, and will expire at the same time, namely, December 31. Persons who wish to hunt rabbits should remeher that they should get out licenses. The season for rabbit hunting will continue to January 15, but the license will remain in force until the end of the year.

When the fire started Chief Stanton of the local department was asked to give them some help. He suggested their getting the Yantic steamer, and got into communication with Mayor Lippitt, and it was decided to send up men and hose by auto if it was found necessary. They were in readiness to go, and were to be called again if needed, but the fire was put out and their serives were not needed. The Yantic steamer was not needed, either. Chief Stanton commended the commany It is interesting to notice that the hunters of Danbury seem to have been the first to take out license under the new law. On the first day of the year the town cierk of that town issued fifteen licenses. Complaint has been made to the commissioners, that deer are shot in the wooded parts of the towns of Ledyard and Groton against the law. The complaint is to the effect that parties have organized expeditions to hunt the deer.
